

We Tried the 3 Fastest Ways to Make £5,000 a Month in the UK. Only One Actually Paid.

Two of them cost us money. One made £4,860 in 30 days, and it ran while we were at work or asleep.

1. Done-for-you dropshipping store

Result: £4,860 profit in 30 days. [CONFIRM]

[Image: Shopify dashboard on a phone showing 162 orders and £6,478.38 in sales. Caption: "Day 30. 162 orders, most of them placed while we were at work."]

We tried this one twice, and the difference between the two attempts is the whole story.

First we built a store ourselves. We used one of the free AI store builders everyone is talking about. Three evenings of picking products, writing descriptions and fighting with a theme. It went live. It made nothing. Not one order in nine days.

Then we paid £20 to have one built for us. We ordered it on a Tuesday night. It landed in the inbox at 08:02 the next morning, loaded with 45+ products that had already been tested, with suppliers connected and shipping set up.

The first order came in on day five at 11:42, while we were at work. The supplier shipped it automatically. We didn't pack anything, post anything or speak to anyone.

By day 30 the store had taken 162 orders. Customers paid £39.99. The suppliers charged £9.99. That's about £30 profit per sale, and £4,860 for the month.

Why it beat the other two: you aren't paid for your hours here. The store takes orders at 3am, during your shift, and on your day off. It's the only one of the three that keeps earning when you stop.

Once it was running it needed about 5 hours a week, which was mostly checking the dashboard and reading the training.

2. Reselling on eBay and Vinted

Result: down £135.70, and 41 hours gone.

[Image: an eBay fee breakdown screen. Caption: "Sold for £812.50. Kept nothing."]

This worked brilliantly in 2014. It doesn't any more.

We spent £640 on stock from car boots and clearance aisles, listed 54 items, and sold every one of them for £812.50. Then eBay took its fees, Royal Mail took the postage, and the packaging took the rest. We finished £135.70 down.

The bigger problem was the time. 41 hours in a month, and none of it optional. Every sale is a photo, a description, three messages from someone offering half price, and a queue at the Post Office.

Verdict: it isn't a business. It's a shift you do at home, and you're bidding against people who do it full time.

3. Trading

Result: £2,000 in, £117.40 left.

[Image: a red equity chart. Caption: "Day 4 looked brilliant. Day 23 didn't."]

Day four was the problem. We were up to £2,410 and felt like geniuses.

By day 11 we were at £1,290. By day 23 we were at £310. We finished the month with £117.40, which is £1,882.60 gone.

It also ate the evenings, because the only thing worse than watching a chart is not watching it.

Verdict: it's the only one of the three that can take money off you while you sleep.

How to get started with the one that worked

Step 1. Claim your store for £20. You pick the type of store you want. It takes about 20 seconds and there's nothing to set up.

Step 2. It arrives within 24 hours. Built by official Shopify Partners, loaded with 45+ winning products, suppliers already connected for automatic shipping. You own 100% of it, with no recurring fees.

Step 3. Your first sale. You get the training and a 1-to-1 call to bring in your first customers. After that the supplier ships every order. You keep about £30 of every £39.99 sale.

Why it costs £20 and not £1,000: the team building these are official Shopify Partners, and Shopify pays them when your store makes real sales. They only win if you win.

And if it doesn't work, you don't pay. If you don't make at least 50 sales in your first 90 days, you get your £20 back. Every last penny.
